SITUATION BRIGHTENS

Both Sides Are Willing and Anxious to Arbitrate—Good Progress Made.

A. J. CARTER AND COLIN McLEOD

May Be Appointed on Board of Arbitration—Former for Miners; Letter, for Operators

Although the end of the coal miners' strike is not yet, things towards that end are progressing favorably.

Both the operators and miners have agreed to submit their dispute to an arbitration board to consist of three members, one of whom is to be appointed by the miners, a second by the operators and a third to be agreed on by both sides. The miners have already chosen A. J. Carter, secretary of District 18, of U. M. W. of A., as their representative, the operators may choose Colin McLeod, barrister of Macleod, while the third one has not yet been decided upon.

Both sides seem anxious now to have the strike settled and the mines again opened without any further unnecessary delay, and the general opinion now is that "The glorious era of peace" will very soon prevail, and a response to the Psalmist prayer, when he said "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces," will be made.

Fire at Lundbreck

A splendid two-story dwelling house belonging to H. H. Rogers, of Lundbreck was destroyed by fire at that place, early on Sunday morning. About 2 o'clock on Sunday morning, fire was seen issuing from the roof. The alarm was instantly made but it was impossible to save the burning building. There had been no person living in it for several weeks, and Mr. Rogers was just then making arrangements to rent it and had effected several improvements on the building and was greatly surprised on Sunday morning to find the building reduced to ashes. How the fire happened is a mystery but it is believed to be the work of an incendiary. There was no insurance on the building.

The United States gold dollar was first coined in 1848.

Rev. G. H. Wycherly, formerly of Scotland but recently of New York, arrived at Lethbridge on Saturday where he has accepted the pastorate of the Presbyterian church.

BUSY ON OPERA HOUSE

Work Was Resumed This Week-

Delayed Freight on C. P. R.
Caused Suspension of Work

WILL COST ABOUT $15,000.00

Builders Have a Large Force of Men at Work—Finished
by July 1st

Work on the big Blairmore opera house was resumed on Monday morning when Frayer & Sinclair, the fortunate contractors, put a large number of men at work on that structure.

This building would have been completed long ago had not the stormy weather of the past winter delayed the trains that were bringing considerable of the material from the Pacific coast. After a very long and anxious wait, a large portion of the material has arrived and work is now being pushed with all haste.

The building will be 110 feet long, 48 feet wide, will have a full size basement and will accommodate 800 people. The stage will be 20 x 24. Four boxes will be installed near each front corner of the stage and one at each front corner of the balcony. An asbestos curtain with several beautifully hand painted curtains will also be installed. A large balcony will be erected. This large opera house is being erected on Fifth avenue, between Victoria and State streets and including curtains and seats will cost upwards of fifteen thousand dollars. It is being erected by the Blairmore Opera House Company, Limited, and if good weather continues, will be ready for occupancy by July 1st when a celebration of an elaborate nature is proposed to take place.

Blairemore Band

To soft rocks, or beat a knot-ed oak.—Congreve.

About thirty of our citizens, who are musically inclined, assembled in the Greco brick building on Monday evening last and organized a band which they were pleased to name the Blairmore Band.

The first order of business was the election of officers which resulted in the following: T. Frayer, honorary president; M. Rose, president and treasurer; A. Pagano, secretary. The following committee was appointed to form laws, arrange for the initiation price and the purchase of suitable instruments: W. A. Beebe, D. C. Drain, E. Morino, Frank Greco, E. Molina and E. Trouo.

The first practice was given in the Greco building on Tuesday evening. Frequent practices will be given and they will discourse eloquent music from now until they have sufficiently mastered that art to play in the streets or in some other open air place, when, in the words of Shakespeare, those beautiful strains will come over our ears like the sweet south wind that breathes upon a bank of violets, stealing and giving odor."

The Japanese Umbrella

A Chinese Episode and its Horrible Effect

sawing hang above the table the room was devoid of other furniture.

"Captain Leeson," he announced in a low voice, "on trial for betraying secrets of the White Brothers."

"Captain Leeson has made it known, with some sternness, 'I saw and did little by your orders. He died in the street'."

"Stevens?" inquired the leader. "He claims to be Nelson, the one who died that night."

The never nodded in unison, but did not share their glee from Nelson's angry face.

He kept silent now, briefly reviewing the strange events that had snatched him from the busy streets of London into a vision of death or life, and made it necessary that he should visit a well-known silk importer, whose place of business lay in the heart of San Francisco's reconstructed Chinatown.

Jay Nelson had been glad enough to eliminate all memory of his last year in China. There had been one horrible incident from which he had fled, but when shadow had lurked in the heart of mind, he had little time for his return to America. In most depths he had laughed at those years that pursued his first sleepless, fear-haunted nights. After awhile the fear gave place to a sense of security fostered by the practical worksday happenings of the day.

Today, however, as he passed along Dupont-street and turned into a narrower thoroughfare, there burst upon him the significant fact that this part of a great city was but a fragment of the past.

He had to pause once or twice and inquire his way, for the house of the importers was set in the heart of the web of streets and alleys. Then when he got lost, but a few yards ahead the sound of a single, mournful, wailing along in the crowd notified him of the meaning of which was all too clear to Jay Nelson. He had a vague realization that this emblem of an old horror might have been evolved from the past.

He pressed forward, eager to stretch forth his hand and prove that the Japanese umbrella was a thing of air, was an optical illusion. But always it danced before him like a will-o'-the-wisp, showing a glint of gold and green and then melting into a dozen trifling ripples.

Where it went there too must follow until he could prove by aerial contact with its surface that it was a remnant of his fancy and not the dreaded emblem of the White Brotherhood.

It drew him on down into the very bowels of the earth.

The paper umbrella collapsed and was cast aside, the heavy turn of the setter awoke from his reverie-like state and stared first at a strange face that confronted him, then about the scene, a scene of utter emptiness of furniture and walls, a single, dimly lighted, by a single swinging oil lamp. Nelson's gaze came back to the face of the Chinese, and he shivered slightly, for the face was that of a man of the despised order—the sign was written on the forehead.

Instantly Nelson whipped off his coat, holding it before him as a shield and backed to the starway leading upward.

"Hold a moment," said the Chinese in the Cantonese dialect; "I am not alone."

"Who else?" demanded Nelson sharply in the same tongue.

"The brotherhood—at each stair head they await your coming if you come up right," returned the Chinese imperiously.

"What do you want with me?"

"Command of the big brother that you be brought before him for trial."

"He came on from Hongkong to seek me," said Nelson.

The Chinese replied sharply: "The brood is everywhere, Captain Leeson—wherever there are offenders there also will be found a tribunal of the brotherhood."

"Why do you call me by Captain Leeson's name?" questioned Nelson warily.

"Because you are he."

"Suppose I am not?"

"You are," asserted the man roughly. "The brotherhood does not make mistakes."

"You blunder this time, I am Nelson."

The other laughed derisively. "I was told you would claim that name, Nelson."

"Ah," cried Nelson suddenly, "you are the big brother! This is the tributary. You are alone; you thought to fool me; see you later, Tai Lao!" He started to leap up the stairs and then stopped short.

Tai Lao made no move to arrest his flight. He merely folded his long-sleeved blouse into either a capacious sleeve and smiled widely.

It was this smile that halted Nelson's departure, the smile and a certain hissing whisper that sank down the stairs and bore him on his flight.

As Nelson turned to the Chinese, "Have I ever with this court of yours? Be quick, for I have no business to attend to—matters of importance."

"Very good, Captain Leeson," commented the man called Tai Lao. "Follow me."

He led the way to a shadowy corner and pushed open a door into another dimly lighted room. At a long table sat seven men, three in either side and one at the end. At the farther end of the table there stood a wide, almost empty chair. Except for a few

BALZAC WAS HUNGRY.

A Hundred Oysters and Twelve Cups

Just Started His Meal.

If He'd Go to India, Shakespeare says of the novel he did not live a great age it was probably due to his reverence of nature's rules for work and recreation. His labors as a writer were the highest, then Nature has labored and then, after periods of intense application, would go to the opposite extreme: Frederick the Great, for instance, would make a one-leaf someth of the folly of that as well as the comedy.

He not only burned the midnight oil, but worked from six in the morning to twenty hours' daily labor for weeks together until some novel that he was engaged on was finished.

He had given up his hobby of composing his own life in China. There he had been in the diplomatic service of his country. Leeson, his friend, an Englishman in the British employ at Hongkong—ancestor of the author of Hongkong—had interested Nelson in the establishment of a legal firm down in Amara.

It was Leeson's ambition to clean out the lepers alined in the city, to root them out from their places of concealment and transport them to the colony where they could be sent to be made for their segregation, whereas their cases should be studied and modern methods employed.

It happened that the afflicted ones looked on the idea of banishment with distaste. They cared little to be parted from friends and familiar scenes. They cared nothing whatever for the benefits that might accrue to posterity through their segregation.

Leeson's efforts met with little success. He gained permission to capture the afflicted ones, and so his colony prospered, for awhile. Then there was formed against him the society of the White Brothers, created to protect the afflicted ones throughout the city from Leeson's efforts.

One day he was attacked by a certain green and gold paper parrot, the meaning of which was all too clear to Jay Nelson. He had a vague realization that this emblem of an old horror might have been evolved from the past.

He pressed forward, eager to stretch forth his hand and prove that the Japanese umbrella was a thing of air, but was an optical illusion. But always it danced before him like a will-o'-the-wisp, showing a glint of gold and green and then melting into a dozen trifling ripples.

The morning was spent in the albums, where he gathered the information of the world, and then afternoon whiled away in listening to a concert at the Conservatoire. There he was welcomed by the fashionables of both sexes, noticing with approval the manner in which he had donned in view of his morning's occupation.

On quitting the concert room he carried Werder off to dine with him at Very's, the famous French and aristocratic restaurant in Paris.

The place was full of guests, and those who were in proximity to the restaurant were astonished to see the following menu ordered and nearly all consumed by one man, since Werder, it is true, took only a sort of little chicken, a few mushrooms, 12 chops, a young duck, a pair of rats-partridges, a sole, hors d'oeuvre, fruit (more than a dozen), a dessert, wine, coffee, liqueurs, tea, and Chinese robes.

Mr. Brooke was born in London in 1819, and was educated at Winchester and Cambridge University. His bride was Charlesine Johnson.

It was in the first quarter of the last century that James Brooke, who served in the British navy and the Indian army, became a brigadier-general when making a voyage through the islands of the Indian archipelago, struck by the beauty and wealth of the islands, as well as the ferocity of the natives, and customs of the people, resolved to enjoy the one by subduing and civilizing the other.

He joined the Royal Navy, a yacht and 140 men, under Edward Murray, sent for the chief. When he reached Borneo in 1839, he found a rebellion in progress against Pan Mactan, the native ruler of Sarawak, vassal of the rajah of Brunei.

Brooke promptly offered his aid to the rajah, defeated the rebels and re-established the rajah in his territory.

Another two days did it take to instance the gunners, when one was injured, voluntarily immured himself in a room made totally dark for his recovery.

The fortitude which enabled him to adopt this course and the ingenuity by which he preserved his health and facilitated the recovery of the Rajah, especially during his period of imprisonment, are sufficiently remarkable.

But the doctor also kept on accurate records of his impressions of the country, and his notes were taken up again upon the light after the supreme moment at which he satisfied himself that he was not blind.

He found that in nine months' darkness his eyes had lost all sense of color. The world was black, white and gray. They had also lost the sense of taste. His treatment was to help him to civilizing the natives, fighting, head hunting and piracy and building up trade with foreign countries.

In government he was recognized in 1863 by England. Similar action had previously been taken by the United States. Rajah Brooke died in 1868, but was succeeded by his nephew, the present ruler, who was knighted in 1889 by Queen Victoria.

Her Telegram

"My daughter gave us an awful scare the other day," said a Cleveson caller. "She went away for a visit in New York and she sent a telegram from California her first stop. My daughter advised her first stop. My daughter advised her first stop. She had visions of train wrecks, sudden illness and all sorts of things. And what do you think the message said?"

"I forgot to tell you—don't eat up all the strawberry jam while I'm gone."

A countryman who visited the National Gallery, stopped in front of a portrait which showed a man sitting in a high-backed chair. There was a small plaque on the wall above the painting reading: "A portrait of Edward Smith, by himself." The reader read the inscription and then turned to himself.

"Regret feels that this fellow is himself," he said. "Anybody who looks at that picture 'ud' know Smith's by himself. There ain't no one in the paintin' with the faith they profess to follow."

A small party of men and women parades up and down following some procession with long poles, the top of which flutter a small triangular flag, the very shape of which is Hindu, and a couple of tom-toms; this is to invoke the aid of some of the many saints and deities.

The pilgrims follow the methods to avert the cholera adopted by these semi-developed Mahomedans, who have many superstitions, many of which are derived from their Mohammedan religion, and which they profess to follow.

A small party of men and women parades up and down following some procession with long poles, the top of which flutter a small triangular flag, the very shape of which is Hindu, and a couple of tom-toms; this is to invoke the aid of some of the many saints and deities.

The fact that the pilgrims carry "chatis" is due to a brilliant notion arrived at by the chief "shahid," or priest, who has been appointed to lead the crowd by the fort of Akbar, which is seen in the distance. He had a vision this year, and in consequence it was arranged that the chief of the holy edifice, who had just marched and run for some time, must be filled if the cholera were to be subdued. So inhabitants from villages and towns throughout the capital carrying "gurahs" of water, which were emptied into the holy tank, whether they had been brought from some body of water or not. Each pilgrim, feeling that he had done all in his power to avert the calamity, returned happily enough, little realizing that the papant enough to do so, in his seven days' march back or was carrying infection to his hitherto unaffected home from this city of mud-roofed houses, in which dwelt huddled together some 130,000 exceedingly dirty inhabitants.

When can a civilized nation do without its learned professors to help the ignorant masses, who will wade down to the river, wash themselves and their clothes, throw all refuse into the water, and then drink of it?

The Fateh Kadi is very typical of those in Kathiawar. Built upon a limestone rock, and the foundation of the piers being boats filled with stones to sink them to the bed of the river, the skeleton structure stands there, a silent witness to the terrible tides which rise to flood level.

The quaint spired building in the distance is the great mosque of Shah Haidar, who established schools in the walls.

His hotel, madrasah seems to have taken place on his return journey from Kandahar. It is a structure built by his death his construction completed the route to Kutanen

Persia by himself. He was poisoned, one may suppose, by someone who had been his follower, and died in the Hindu priest of the ancient temple on the site of which the mosque stands.

How to Grow Rich.

Many years ago there were few better known characters in Manchester than Mr. S. Brooke, the wealthy and eccentric millionaire. His "Brook Inn" innkeeper's story was told, illustrating of his acuteness or his waggery.

One day, as he was seated on the platform of an omnibus, he was joined by an acquaintance who, years before, had been one of his schoolfellows. After some general conversation,

"Mr. Brooke, there is one thing I very much want to ask you."

"What is that?"

"Well, you have something you have seen in your career which has turned to gold. My experience, unfortunately, has been precisely the opposite."

DR. CHASE'S

KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Not one person in a hundred can get along at this time of year without taking something to enliven the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Too much eating of heavy artificial foods, too little outdoor exercise, is the culprits.

The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fail and become torpid and dead. The bowels become constipated and stomach disarrangements follow.

There is a marked difference, which makes this condition more certain and more quickly than any other, and this is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pill.

This medicine gets the bowels in action at once and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleaning of the filtering and purifying organs.

With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes its healthy condition, appetite improves and the whole organism appears as well as irritability and depression disappears.

You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment for bowel trouble, constipation, backache, rheumatism, diabetes, Bright's Disease, Jaundice, etc.

"Well!"—Life.

It Might Have Been.

Miss Maude Adams was driving along an English country road past the entrance to a manor of very small stature, when a party of American tourists passing the couple recognized the actress.

"Hold the car to his companion, 'that is the penalty of fame,'" "What was that?" asked the actress.

"Are you sure?" answered Miss Adams. "Are you certain they didn't recognize 'The Little Minister'?"

"There's a self-satisfied man said, "that's what I think you should do in the matter. I'm not a lawyer, but this is a bit of advice which I can give you."

"What do you think of it?" "Well," replied his companion mildly.

"It's a nice little story."

"His heart is as black as his mouth," hissed the heroine.

"And as false," commented the comedian.

CHOLERA IN INDIA.

How Mahomedans Seek to Avert the Dread Plague.

During the past century cholera has been a frequent visitor in India, which the year 1865 has crept into the valley silently along with the Hindu pilgrims, ash-beamed fairies, little children, men and women who were swept along in that way up to the sacred caves of Amarnath—which are situated in the snow-covered mountains at the top of the Pir Panjal range, or along the 125 miles of road which leads here from the nearest railroad station, Rawal Pindi, in the Punjab.

During the past century the methods to avert the cholera adopted by these semi-developed Mahomedans, who have many superstitions, many of which are derived from their Mohammedan religion, and which they profess to follow,

A small party of men and women parades up and down following some procession with long poles, the top of which flutter a small triangular flag, the very shape of which is Hindu, and a couple of tom-toms; this is to invoke the aid of some of the many saints and deities.

The fact that the pilgrims carry "chatis" is due to a brilliant notion arrived at by the chief "shahid," or priest, who has been appointed to lead the crowd by the fort of Akbar, which is seen in the distance. He had a vision this year, and in consequence it was arranged that the chief of the holy edifice, who had just marched and run for some time, must be filled if the cholera were to be subdued. So inhabitants from villages and towns throughout the capital carrying "gurahs" of water, which were emptied into the holy tank, whether they had been brought from some body of water or not. Each pilgrim, feeling that he had done all in his power to avert the calamity, returned happily enough, little realizing that the papant enough to do so, in his seven days' march back or was carrying infection to his hitherto unaffected home from this city of mud-roofed houses, in which dwelt huddled together some 130,000 exceedingly dirty inhabitants.

When can a civilized nation do without its learned professors to help the ignorant masses, who will wade down to the river, wash themselves and their clothes, throw all refuse into the water, and then drink of it?

It is a mistake. You can't get up as when they used to do.

These are the symptoms that the blood is out of order, and that a medicine is needed. Many people have headaches and a feeling of languor, loss of appetite, low spirits and pains, still others have pimples and skin rashes, low fever, etc. get up in the morning feeling just as bad as when they got up to go to bed.

Do not worry. Doctors of the digestive apparatus should be dealt with at once before complications arise, that may be fatal. If you are not able to get to this end and one that is within reach of your means, then call in a doctor. Do not delay, but see now, how can you get rid of the disease? Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best stomach regulator that can be got.

CHURCHILL'S REFORMS.

Cantons, private gardens, and social, and literary evenings are to be the lot of the well-conducted British colony. The former commissioners, a draft of rules, modified in the case of persons undergoing preventive detention, was issued recently by the Home Secretary, Mr. Winston Churchill.

In the course of his introductory remarks Mr. Churchill points out that punishment should be fit for the offence and not be reserved for the subject to the new treatment. Neglect or relaxation would lead to escape or mutiny, violence.

Only the professional criminal is aimed at in the new form of punishment, which is restricted to those already found deserving of three years' penal servitude.

"It has proved a matter of much difficulty," comments the Home Secretary, "to secure uniform action among the various magistrates throughout the country" and he proposes therefore to issue further instructions to the police to guide them in the selection of cases for presentation to the Director of Public Prosecutions.

In addition to the qualifications existing in the Bill, the Home Office says, "any case submitted must be (a) over thirty years old; (b) have already undergone a term of penal servitude; and (c) be a person who has been convicted of a serious offence."

After the draft rules the career of Mr. William Sikes, the professional burglar, will be something like that of a schoolboy.

He will start by being placed in one of three grades into which he will follow, according to his ordinary, social and disciplinary rank. Six months later, if he has been a zealous and industrious worker, he will be awarded a certificate of industry and good conduct.

Together with this certificate Sikes will receive a good conduct stripe, which entitles him either to certain privileges or to a small money payment.

If he continues to behave well he will be allowed to attend evening classes and receive certificates which will render him eligible to have a little garden of his own.

At certain prescribed times he will be allowed to go to the prison kitchen if possible, the produce thereof will be purchased for use in the prison market rates, the proceeds being credited to him.

It is common for a man to work well after receiving four certificates, be entitled to promotion to the special grade and become a veritable aristocrat of the prison.

But if his defects from the path of industry his lot will be a harder one. Any misconduct or any exercise of bad influence on others will lead him into a downwardly grade, and in this he will not be equalled with others except at labor.

While he is in the ordinary or special grades, however, he will not only be employed in a variety of work but will be allowed to earn gratuity by his work.

He may either spend a portion of the gratuity in purchasing such articles as he fancies to his daily menu, or may send it to his family or allow it to accumulate against the time when he is once again fighting the world's battle.

Should he fall ill, genuinely ill, his gratuity will continue proportionate to his average earnings when he is fit.

So long as he avoids the disciplinary grade, he will be permitted to be a customer at the prison canteen, a new institution which will be a centre of food and other small articles at costs which will be charged against the amount of his gratuity.

After gaining his first certificate he became Commissioner of Inland Revenue for a year, and then Under-Secretary for India at the early age of twenty-four. His services in the United Kingdom were then to the Government of India came under his personal supervision.

Not only this, but in the evenings he "shall be allowed such additional educational, literary and scientific studies as may be prescribed from time to time."

He will be permitted, too, to write and receive a letter twice weekly, a half hour from the bar at fixed intervals.

Throughout his life within prison walls he will have been periodically visited by his friends, who will be associated with the duty of promoting the reformation of those under his spiritual charge.

Dinner service will be held weekly in the dining room and there will be, in addition, such mission services, lectures and addresses on religious, moral and secular subjects as may be arranged.

Not Again.

A farmer going over his land the other day caught a village loafer, accompanied by his dog, trespassing in a field, and the dog, in its fury, attempted to rub her with it but did it no good. My mother, who is a Quaker, and I went to see Cutlers Remedy and to wash her with Cutlers Remedy. There was a great deal of noise and the dog barked all the time. After we had washed her she was quite cured. She has the purest skin and the best hair. I am glad to say the doctor declared, "I am glad to say all signs of the disease are gone."

And that the success of Cutlers Remedy is not confined to the treatment of dogs, we can assure you. We have had many instances where the dog has been sent to us to be treated and we have always met the man in another of it and exchanged in a very angry tone:

"What—trespassing again?"

"No," answered Geordie, "It's still the same trespass. Fair play, son; fair play, mom."

Faith Unshaken.

"Is that man a reliable weather prophet?" asked Mrs. Fawcett. "He should say he is," replied Fawcett. "Sometimes he is right." He is a few days ahead of time or a few days behindhand, but it is always gets here."

Not Even Started.

Many a man imagines that he is the top of the ladder when, as a matter of fact, he still has one foot on the ground.

Miss P. Magee, of Belduld, delivered six gosses to an English carrier who watched over the pounds and tares of them, but tipped the scales at 14 pounds.

The Gutenberg Bible Is Now Worth

The most valuable printed book in the world is a Gutenberg Bible, which was printed at Mainz, Germany, the first printed book. Its present value would be hard to determine, as one copy has recently come to market. In 1894 a copy in London brought $19,500. In 1897 the Ashburnham copy sold for $10,000. The original copy of "Moby Dick" was sold for $1,000. Robert Hoe estimated that it would not be long before the price of one of these rare copies would come to $50,000.

After the Gutenberg Bible, Robt. H. Dodd, who is an authority on rare books, places the Psalter, dated 1457, which is the second printed book printed with type. It has been sold for $1,000. The book, offered for sale would bring $35,000.

In addition to the qualifications existing in the Prevention of Cruelty Act, the following case would be submitted must be (a) over thirty years old; (b) have already undergone a term of penal servitude; and (c) be a person who has been convicted of a serious offence.

AT THE MATINEE.

Noted Opera Singer as She Appears Off the Stage.

THE RUSSIAN ORCHESTRA.

A Craft That Calls Real Artists to Do Its Work—Motives Borrowed From Our Own Roadside and Fields Instead of From Foreign Museums.

Dear Elsie—Don't you like to see me edd opera singers off the stage, where you can get them at close range and feel that they are really human—and not some impersonation of the brain of Wagner, Puccini or some other great composer? I do, and this week I had the pleasure of sitting next to Geraldine Farrar at a matinee performance of the Imperial Russian Balletska orchestra, and what a delight it was to hear them strum and burr their musical instruments to such beauty!

She is just as lovely off the stage as on and looks exactly like her pictures. What did she wear? A charmingly simple empire frock of black crepe de chine with yoke and belt, a high collar or a crescent-shaped dored neck. Let me say, passing that this not is the smart thing to use for yokes this winter. Setting off her fair beauty to perfection were six strands—I counted them for your benefit—of magnificent pearls, small gems, but of wonderful and a long slender fingerless. The musical numbers were chiefly Russian peasant songs, although the players are able to produce music by great masters most artistically. A butterfly waltz was the most popular number of the evening, and from the first instant of those beautiful winged insects, it always hints me to call them by the name, for they have sorred so high above the grub state—indeed, one could actually feel the butterflies whooping home from the sun-dappled fields, their shimmering in opaque fusion the delicate flavors.

To change the subject, have I told you about the exquisite Christmas gift Dorothy D. made for me? Well, I really haven't had much time for the holidays, are just past, and I am not in the mood for any more decorations. Dorothy is an expert craftsman in this work, and like all members of the new cult, she is going to nature as an inspiration for her designs. She has worked out many novelties that are not going to Italy, Spain or Orient for their motives, but are finding them in the fields, along the roadside and in the seashore.

The beautiful wild carrot or Queen Anne's lace is a favorite motif, characterized by its white and wavy green leaves. It is a sort of low there that any American woman could wear without being accused of a longing for strawberry leaves and a ducal coronet. Only a true lover of nature could have made the design, even though Dorothy is not the type of person who is any sturdier to be done, do it. If not, hang out the clothes to dry.

That's the whole operation. A quick woman can perform it in thirty minutes. Most of the time she need not work. Need she lift the clothes to the machine? No, she can lay them flat on the floor at the bottom of the tub, and let out the dirty water. Let in clean water and run the machine two or three times to rinse the clothes. With a twist of the wrist, switch the power to the wringer and wring the clothes into a washing tub of bluish water on the other side of the room. Any starching to do, do it. If not, hang out the clothes to dry.

Furthermore, washing done this way can save two or three hours of hand-washing. It is better with a machine to wash frequently. Silly use the machine as a clothes hamper and when it is full turn on the water and the power. Instead of a bougher, washing becomes not much more of an ordeal than winding the clock.

When I give you the recipe you want for grapefruit salad I'll excuse you from giving you mine. Here's a recipe for grapefruit. Remove the rind of the fruit and arrange it on lettuce leaves and then mix the juice of the fruit with a light French dressing of oil and vinegar and pour it over the pulp. Garnish with romaine or pimento olives. Simple and delicious! Loving yours,

Bargain Papering.

A young woman who thinks she cannot repair her room this season because she can't afford it should make sure that cost is prohibitive before resigning herself to drab.

One girl has just papered her bedroom charmingly at a total cost of less than $3. Reading of bargains in wall paper one day, she noted some that were reduced to a cent or two a roll.

It is true that the cost would be dreadful, but the picture was made of a nice quality of figured cream ceiling paper at a cent a roll for the walls and a narrow rose border at 2 cents a yard.

The border was cut out by the girl herself and ran at top of room and down the sides of each corner.

The paper was put on by a country paperhanger, a friend of the cook, at less than the cost of hire. The work is not likely to give satisfaction, though many women are fairly skilled paperhangers.

Most stores have bargains in paper, though few as cheap as the ones described. By taking advantage of them a room can be freshened for a surprisingly small sum of money.

To Stop Cough in Church.

Every woman has experienced the mortification of one of those exasperating, hacking little coughs which tickle the throat and seem to grow worse with every effort to overcome them.

They always come upon one just at a time when the kindly cough drop has been left at home and it is impossible to procure the saving sips of water to relieve the irritation.

Many a woman has hastily left her seat in a church with a red face and the echo of a hacking little cough following her down the aisle and into the vestibule when the trouble might have been avoided by a simple rest.

A cough drop is not an article of first necessity. Between the missions, he exec an open impasse, and Farrar studied a muscle score. I could hear her softly hum a line or two and say when she finished: "That's how I'm going to intercede. It's good for you."

I have given Farrar, the center of the stage, but she paid into indifference when the Russian court orchestra was playing. It is wonderful and has been the musical sensation of the season here in New York. An audience, including a representative body of business men, seemed to move as if by command of the czar or on pain of instant execution if he turned on his conductor's box in a less mechanical manner to acknowledge the appreciative applause of the audience.

Little girls' bows of two-colored ribbons or Persian ribbons may readily be made. These may be worn with stiff collars or plumed to collar of a blazer or silk blouse.

Ribbons, too, are made of ribbon closely plaited ends with a bow at the end.

These things may be made from little pieces of silk or ribbon, not expensive to buy and usually to be found in the workshopt at home.

So, you see, sometimes fashion is kind to the girl with the limited income.

I know how interested you are in the mandolin, and that world, wonderful once would have appeared to you to be a wonderland.

There are now, however, a hundred ways to get the piece of the pie in numbers and in tone value of something new for the table service.

WASHING MADE EASY.

A Woman May Do the Work in Thirty Minutes.

Eighty-five diners will pay for a washing machine of family size that will wash better than any woman can wash by hand. A good machine may, perhaps, be bought for even a little less. The machine is equipped with a wringer that can easily be peeled off and washed from the sink, and makes the machine a complete washout.

A washer in a day will make up for hot and cold water and dishpan connections, then the machine is ready for business, says the Delinester.

How simple washing becomes! Strip the clothes. Put the clothes in the machine. Turn a valve and let in the hot water. Turn a switch and let in the electricity. Close the top to keep in the steam and smell and go about your other business, not for a day or half a day, but for twenty minutes.

Then comes the wash and soap, etc., when the clothes are at the bottom of the tub.

Turn the switch and let out the dirty water. Let in clean water and run the machine two or three times to rinse the clothes. With a twist of the wrist, switch the power to the wringer and wring the clothes into a washing tub of bluish water on the other side of the room. Any starching to do, do it. If not, hang out the clothes to dry.

That's the whole operation. A quick woman can perform it in thirty minutes.

Most of the time she need not work.

Need she lift the clothes to the machine until we hang them out?

All she must do is to feed them through a wringer.
